The Alaska Department of Fish and Game (ADFG), Division of Wildlife Conservation, is recruiting for a Wildlife Biologist III to serve as an Endangered Species Biologist for the Threatened, Endangered and Diversity (TED) Program in Juneau.

We are looking for a dynamic and motivated wildlife professional to participate as part of the state's endangered species research and response team. The position will provide expert scientific and policy information and review for Federal Endangered Species Act (ESA) issues, including status reviews and listing proposals; synthesize and provide critical review of available biological information to inform ADFG's scientific positions and conservation planning efforts; develop and participate in species-specific workgroups, as needed; and develop, lead, or participate in small-scale field research projects.
